KING LEAR Upon such sacrifices, my Cordelia, The gods themselves throw incense. Have I caught thee? He that parts us shall bring a brand from heaven, And fire us hence like foxes. Wipe thine eyes; The good-years shall devour them, flesh and fell, Ere they shall make us weep: we'll see 'em starve first. Come. Exeunt KING LEAR and CORDELIA, guarded. EDMUND

SCENE III. The British camp near Dover.

King Lear is Shakespeare's most gruesome tragedy about a nobleman getting his eyes gouged out, Oberynt Martell- style. Hmm. Still not getting all of the pertinent points in. Okay: King Lear is a super-tragic play by some guy named Bill about how, 50-66.6% of the time, your offspring will try to kill you. It's no good.

The year of Lear

The answer to Albany's prayer is the sound of Lear howling. The old King staggers onstage with his daughter in his arms. Cordelia is dead. Lear keeps asking for some way to check if Cordelia is still breathing—a mirror to look for the mist of her breath, or a feather that might move when she exhales. KENT O, my good master— LEAR Prithee, away.
