If you want to fix a Lionel train, what you probably really need to do is repair a Lionel train motor. There isn't much to the rest of the train. The motors tend to be pretty rugged and they've held up over the years. Most "repairs" are really more of a clean and service job, not unlike taking your car in for an oil change.

Postwar Lionel Twin Motor Engines like the FM, F3 and GG-1 present a special problem to the repair person. These Double Motor Engines must be uniquely coordinated for trouble free long term performance. When servicing these engines, both motors should be dealt with at the same time, in the same manner.
