It costs banks money to foreclose, and they'll usually make more doing a short sale than forcing a foreclosure. Banks will sometimes make last-minute deals and postpone the auction if the date for the trustee's foreclosure sale is very close.

Make Money Flipping Short Sales - The Balance

Choosing a short sale allows you to retain some dignity in knowing that you sold your home, and you won't suffer the social stigma of a foreclosure. You won't have any mortgage payments to make, unless you choose to make them, and under Fannie Mae guidelines, you'll be eligible to buy another home in two years instead of 5-7 years.

Reasons to Choose a Short Sale Over a Foreclosure

The solution is a short sale—the process by which an investor buys the troubled property from the homeowner at a price far below the outstanding mortgage and the bank takes a write-off. Real estate investor Dwan Bent-Twyford and her students have made millions with short sales—while helping homeowners prevent foreclosure.
